J. M. HIGH'S WEEKLY STATEMENT!

This will be a Glorious Week at High's. J. M. High, in person, and the buyers of the New York Dry Goods Syndicate, of which he is the only Atlanta member, have just ransacked the Eastern Markets for Bargains and Attractions for his store. Their success has been phenomenal, and GENUINE BARGAINS are to be had in Every Department. Just one year ago the Great Piedmont Exposition threw open its gates to the public. The two weeks following, Atlanta was crowded with visitors, and business was better than ever before known in the history of the house. Now, it is High's ambition to sell More Goods this week and next than were sold the corresponding two weeks of last year. To make this a possibility and a certainty, we offer today

ONE SOLID PAGE OF UNMATCHABLE ATTRACTIONS!

The Prices are FOR THIS WEEK ALONE, and we will not stand by them longer. Read what we offer. Compare our prices where you will, then come to see us before you buy is all we ask.

AT Two pieces cashmere finish Gros Grain, every thread pure silk and guaranteed to wear. This is our $1.50 number, and is a beauty.
AT Two pieces of the new Peau de Soie, just on the market this season, and a most excellent silk, both in appearance and wear.
AT Satin Rhadames, $1.50 number, a grand value and dirt cheap at the price we offer.

COLORED DRESS GOODS.

AT One job lot Wool Cheviots 36-in. wide, well worth $1.75, and is the very best value I have ever shown in Black Silk.
AT I will sell 2 pieces Satin Rhadames, the equal of which has never been offered before for less than $1.75. A grand opportunity for a bargain.
AT I place a lot of 8 pieces Frenche Failles, Royal Armure and Gros Grain, now bringing $2. Every customer coming into the house should see these goods.
AT One piece royal soft finish Armure: warranted not to crack or color silk; never offered before for less than $1.75.
AT I will sell this week the two grand numbers in Gros Grain and Satin Rhadames, heretofore sold for $2. This is the opportunity of a life time.

High is determined to make this week one to be remembered in the Black Silk trade of Atlanta. Values are offered which have never before been even approximated. Prices are utterly ignored, and an opportunity is given to buy Black Silks, such as one rarely gets in a lifetime. Eastern prices are no competition for this sale. Bring your samples and I will save you 15 per cent, besides expenses. Black Silks our leader this week.

COLORED SILKS.

Here Also I have Some Rare Values to Offer:

First, I have a line of 30-yard pattern lengths in Irresistible Peau de Soie. These goods are entirely new; no two alike, and are perfect beauties.
AT Red ink sale of ends and dress lengths in colored and black Silks, to be sold this week; less than half value.
AT French Failles—the same goods our $1.00 neighbors get $1.25 for. Full line new shades.
AT A job lot 20 pieces colored Gros Grains (6c. and Satin Rhadames; worth $1.25.
AT 25-inch Silk Plush; all shades; worth $1.00 to $1.50.
AT Noire Silks for trimming; good line, and 50c. they are bargains for the money.

J. M. High is just back from New York, and has secured some rare things not to be had on his first trip. His store will be packed this week with the very latest importations, and every lady in Atlanta and surrounding country should at least see his stock before making purchases. We are always glad to show what we have. Come to see us.

Black Goods.

This department is my special pride. A simple inspection will convince every customer of the decided superiority of my stock and prices. No off-season. Full up 365 days in the year.

J. M. HIGH.

BY CHARLES DICKENS.

"One motion of my hand, and would I ever again have uttered cry or sound. But I as startled, and drew back. Her eyes were fixed on mine. I know not how it was, but they came and frightened me; and I quailed beneath them. She rose from the bed, still gazing fixedly and steadily on me.

THE BEE HIVE NEEDS ROOM

And to make room at once for the large and increasing trade in our DRESS GOODS AND ART DEPARTMENTS

We have decided to close out our immense stock of Table Linens, Towels, Napkins, Flannels, Bed Puffs and BLANKETS,
WITHOUT ANY REGARD TO THE COST
This sale is Bonafide, and we mean just what we state. Our DRESS GOODS and ART DEPARTMENTS demand the room. To clear out this stock at once we shall make PRICES that will insure their speedy sale. Never before have Housekeeping Goods been placed on sale within 50 per cent of prices we name.

Ladies, you cannot come to the BEE HIVE too early, for you never again will have an OPPORTUNITY TO PURCHASE SUCH GOODS.
Those prices are solid facts.
They are made to sell the goods, and at once. Cost not taken into consideration for this sale.
It will create a terrific excitement among the trade of this city.
Here is where PRICES will be the Drawing Card.

LINEN DEPARTMENT
DRESS GOODS.
DRESS GOODS.
Our trade is increasing so rapidly in this department that we are obliged to extend and make room.
The past week our business in dress stuffs was the largest ever done by this house, which is highly gratifying to us. The public appreciate desirable dress goods at nominal prices.

Silks! Silks! Silks!
The reputation of THE BEE HIVE for fine silks at low prices is well known. Black Gros Grain Silks, 7c; Black Satin Ribbeds 7c; Black Silks at 8c; 25, 35, 45 and upwards.
Fifty pieces French Faint Silk, at 50c; sold everywhere else at 75c.
A job lot of 75 pieces of watered silk, at 50c worth 75c.
Our best Satin Ribbeds, all colors, for Monday, 9c; regular price 12c.
Fifty pieces French Faint Silk, 9c; for Monday only worth 12c.
A large lot of plain and figured China Silks, all colors, very handsome, for tea gowns.
Over 100 pieces of Faint silk novelties, in all the new designs, which are worn so much at present.

BASKETS! BASKETS!
Just opened a large line of fancy baskets for decorating, very odd designs. See them before the assortment is broken.
A large line of lambrequins, tidies, scarfs and covers with the new Ribbon work, very showy and effective. All sizes and fancy work made to order.
Stamping done at short notice. Lessons given in all kinds of embroidery.

Table Linens. Table Linens.
10 pieces of 56 inch real Barnsley cream table damask, beautiful patterns, with lovely red borders; our regular selling price was 65c. yard, reduced to a cheap, out price 55c. yard. It is the greatest value ever offered, and is much less than the actual cost.
5 pieces cream table damask, real Barnsley make, beautiful patterns, never sold for less than 55c. yard.
Price now, to sell them at once, 50c. yard.
7 pieces bleached damask, 72 inches wide, the best value to be found, at 51c. yard, now reduced to 45c.
It is less than cost.
5 pieces bleached table damask, regular price 55c, now 50c. yard.

The Bee Hive The Place.
Last week's bargains eclipsed by the new offerings for Monday.
Prices that should attract the attention of every lady in Atlanta and vicinity.
New goods received from our Boston house, the purchases made direct with the importers, who closed out their entire stock to this one Boston firm.
The Bee Hive.
has received 50 cases, mostly dress goods and art goods, which will be offered at a price that will meet the approval of the trading public.

A MANIA FOR BLOOD.

COLONEL HUGHES-HALLETT ON THE WHITECHAPEL FIEND.

NIGHT DRIVE THROUGH THE PURLIEUS

The Murderer Evidently a Gentleman With High Education—A Theory for His Remarkable Craze.

New York, October 6.—[Special.]—So intense is the feeling among all classes in London in regard to the bloody horrors, committed with impunity in Whitechapel, that it is not surprising to hear of so prominent a member of parliament as Colonel J. C. Hughes-Hallett, of other masterly services, turning detective and visiting the purlieus of the east end of the world's metropolis, with the deliberate intention of meeting, and if possible, apprehending the murderous monomaniac whose crimes have made the civilized world stand aghast.

HUGHES-HALLETT'S STORY. Colonel Hughes-Hallett, who is staying at the Brevoort during his present visit to New York, gave a World reporter yesterday a thrilling account of his midnight visit to the scene of the monster's carnival of crime, made just after the commission of the second atrocity in that gory series which has drawn all eyes to the East End of London. Said Colonel Hallett:

"You may remember that the second of the mutilated bodies discovered in Whitechapel was that of Martha Turner, a hawker, which was found on the second floor landing of the George Yard buildings, in Commercial street, Spitalfields. The similarity of the mutilation, the identity of the district and of the woman's occupation with those of the first victim, convinced me that I had to deal with a case of homicidal mania. I chose a bright, moonlight night for my expedition to Whitechapel, just the kind of a night that the thug whom I wanted to trail had a predilection for. I had already a theory of my own about the kind of man the assassin would turn out to be. I had more upon my mind, and I have seen since no reason to change it, that the perpetrator of these atrocities is a West End man, a gentleman, a person of wealth and culture, perhaps, but certainly of intellectual qualities, finesse and keen discrimination.

"His motive? Well, we will come to that presently. I was convinced that my man left his club, as I was then doing, and disguised himself for his as I was about to do.

"So I drove to my apartments, and doffing my evening dress, got into a plain, quiet pair of trousers, heavy boots, a rough coat and a pot hat. I took plenty of money with me, but no jewelry of any kind, and falling a cab, gave the driver orders to drive to Spitalfields street.

"The man turned and looked at me in such a peculiar way that I am sure he suspected me. The hue and cry had already been raised over the atrocious case, a chill of horror down every spine, and the police had given orders to the cabmen to watch suspicious 'fiends.'

The man said nothing, however, and I pretended not to notice his scrutiny. As we drove along St. James park, I passed a very dear old friend and a fellow-cabman and looked him straight in the eye. He didn't know me, for being an amateur actor as well as a detective, I had 'made up' my face and completed the disguise effectually. The reason, or perhaps the main reason why I was convinced the murderer was a West End man, was the knowledge he had shown of surgery, or rather anatomy; the thoroughness with which he did what he set out to do, and the finesse with which he instantly effaced himself and all tell-tale traces of his fearful work.

"I revolved these thoughts in my mind as I drove past Cambridge music hall into Commercial road, and felt in my pocket to see that the revolver I had put there was READY FOR USE.

"In the light of all the latter developments I have seen no cause for changing this opinion. I had now arrived at near the scene of action as I felt it safe to go in a cab. Midnight had struck, and the air was quiet and cool. I dismissed my cabby, looking him straight in the eye as I gave him my fare, and turned out of Commercial road into Whitechapel. The approaches to the scene of the maniac's operations are not particularly dirty, or filthy, or tumble-down, or indeed, in any way calculated to attract unusual attention. I crossed them that night, and ever since, lung a brooding expectancy, a mysterious suggestion of something fearsome to be that could not fail to impress the most callous observer. As I walked from Whitechapel into Hanbury street, intending, by a round about route through the short streets and alleys connecting Commercial road and Hanbury street, to de-bouche into the latter, and thence into Commercial street, where the

LAST VICTIM HAD BEEN FOUND.

"I was struck with the fact that the unfortunate woman who frequent that district in swarms were, as I approached the scene of the tragedy, becoming rarer and rarer. I heard none of them singing or shouting their maddening endearments, or exhibiting in the friskiness of their behavior, the reckless glee which is so repulsive to them. The sidewalks there, as in London generally, were in good order, and cleanly kept. In your slums here, or in a corresponding quarter of New York, you would find your gutters filled with filthy water and refuse, the sidewalks unflagged, perhaps, or torn up, littered with dirt and shavings. I found nothing of this sort there. The houses on either side of those short streets are two and three stories high, brick dwellings, used by workmen. There are no porches in front of them, and no distinguishing marks of architecture about them. The pavements are of brick, of course, and in good order, and the roadways are macadamized and in good order. The gas lamps were burning bright, and there was no evidence of the ramshackle and tumble-down lanes and alleys and cul-de-sac which one might suppose such a thing would choose for the scene of his operations.

"In the smaller streets between Hanbury and Whitechapel streets the gas lamps are, of course, not so near together. And there was no evidence of the ramshackle and tumble-down lanes and alleys and cul-de-sac which one might suppose such a thing would choose for the scene of his operations.

AT CERTAIN INTERVALS, whether at the intersections of streets or not, and just before reaching George's Yard I saw what brought me forcibly then before to my mind the thrill of terror which pervaded the neighborhood.

The sidewalk was almost deserted. At the next corner, a stone's throw from where 'Emma' met her fate, stood a bobby, a policeman, you know, looking away from me. There were several women on the opposite side of the street, and a group of men. Another policeman was just in the act of approaching them to move on, when, just in front of me, I heard a long drawn shivering sigh, an agonized catching of the breath, such as denotes invariably mental agony or an extremity of terror. An unfortunate woman, not twenty feet away, was standing in the bright lamp light, feeling as if in the act of fainting. By a peculiar defect or blur in the lamp, her shadow was projected on a dead wall just to her right, with a misshapen distinctness which, in the unsettled condition of her nerves, was too much for her. She gave an awful

DIAMOND HUNTING

Gems Found in Georgia, and Stories of the Finders.

From the Detroit Free Press.

A discovery of small diamonds on a farm near the town of Hall county has created little excitement throughout the state, and the people of Hall county in particular are beginning to think that the eccentric old scientist, Dr. Moses F. Stephenson, may be fulfilled after all. Dr. Stephenson has long maintained that the geological formation of Hall county was the same as that of the rich diamond belt in Brazil and exactly similar to that of the Kimberly, South African fields. "The micaceous sandstone which underlies Hall county," he said, "is the true matrix of the diamond, and no account of the numerous plantations and so-called bare living to their owners, will be scientifically developed for their hidden treasures. The 'find' will be prodigious, for these hills and valleys that form the Chattahoochee's watershed have hidden in their depths millions and millions of diamonds of the worth of diamonds and other precious stones."

The crack farmers used to wag their heads unbelievably when the old scientist talked thus, and whisper among themselves that the doctor was getting crankier every day. Now they begin to think there may have been a great deal of method in his madness. Dr. Stephenson was a man of the most profound attainments, and his worth was understood and appreciated in the scientific world. He was a member of scientific societies in all parts of the globe, and by the assistance of several learned men, who were glad to come to him for council and to admire, he was able to publish two or three works on scientific subjects.

the sale of which gave him a small income and kept him from actual want. Before the war, when there was a United States mint at Dalton, in the neighboring county of Lumpkin, Dr. Stephenson was the chief assayer. When the mint was abandoned after the ordinances of secession were adopted by Georgia he tendered his services to the confederate government and was attached to the medical department of the army until Lee's surrender at Appomattox. The wreck of war had swept away his savings, and he and his motherly old wife—who, Heaven bless her, never lost faith in him—settled down at Gainesville. They lived here quietly, humbly, but always hopefully, until the end that comes to all of us ungrudgingly for them. The doctor's tall, ungainly figure was a familiar one on the streets of Gainesville, and he was usually the center of an incredulous group of men, who listened himself-praying to what they called "the doctor's diamond delusion." To the day of his death he had hope that on some vague tomorrow his would get financial backing and be able to put his diamond-working machinery into operation. He had explored every hole and corner of northeast Georgia, and shortly after the war made an exhaustive geological survey of this section of the state. It was during this investigation that his attention was turned seriously to the peculiar geologic formation known as the "diamond belt," which, beginning in western Virginia, runs through Kentucky, Tennessee, the Carolinas and Georgia, but has its most pronounced development in Hall county. In his report of the survey Dr. Stephenson called attention to Hall county's mineral possibilities, and later on published a pamphlet on the diamond belt in which he declared that it was his deliberate opinion as a geologist who had made a careful study of the subject that Hall county

An old Cherokee warrior with whom I topped on one occasion at his home in Quaker Valley, N. C., had a belt of deer skin studded with amethysts, moss agates and quartz crystals. He also showed me a ring hammered out of virgin gold which had descended to him from his grandfather. A diamond of about two carats and two small, irregularly shaped rubies were set in the crown of the ring, and to me that there were similar stones in the possession of other families in the valley. This old Quaker valley warrior said that there was a legend in the tribe that when the white men under Ponce de Leon, who penetrated the interior as far as Novochee Valley and opened several gold mines there, the remains of which are yet to be seen, passed through the country lying west of the Chattahoochee they found diamonds in the beds of the small tributary creeks.

who had squatted on a piece of land near the Shawlowood on the Chattahoochee river, and a stone of considerable size as he was washing for gold in the bed of a small branch. He was courting the daughter of a neighboring farmer at the time, and he presented the "pretty" to his sweetheart, who had it fixed in a pin and wore it as a brooch. The young lady was quite a coquette, and Tomlin was only one among the small army of admirers who were at her beck and call. Among this coterie of wooing swains was a stalwart fellow named

Keith, and he and Tomlin were not the best of friends, having quarreled over the ownership of some hogs. The night after the coquette he got Tomlin's pretty stone fixed into a pin Keith called upon her. He noticed the trinket, and she, exhibiting it proudly, exclaimed: "The man that giv' me thet air 'prettys' I'm shore agoin' to marry." "Shore" repeated Keith, and his face darkened with jealous anger. "Plumb shore!" reiterated the girl; "an' his name air Hank Tomlin." At this Keith sprang to his feet with an angry curse and rushed from her presence. She followed him to the door of her father's cabin and laughed tantalizingly as he strode across the fields. Suddenly her laughter changed to a cry of terror as Keith reached the edge of the clearing and came face to face with Tomlin, who had been out hunting, and had stopped on his way home to see the girl he loved. The encounter was so sudden that both men halted and for a moment stood facing each other in silence. Then Keith said: "Look—there, Hank! Com' on, we love Sally an' so do I. Both we'us ain't hev her. I hate y wuss'n pizon an' we'll settle the diffiklity right hyar an' now. May the best man win." As he finished speaking he drew from his belt a monstrous looking knife and sprang toward his rival. Tomlin could have killed Keith with his rifle, but he was too chivalrous to take unfair advantage of his foe. Throwing the weapon aside, he drew his own knife and the two blades clashed together, as panted fiercely the rivals struggled for the mastery. For a moment the cause of the duel watched the conflict in silence and hen with a piercing scream ran swiftly to the combatants. As she neared the spot, both fell to the ground dead. Tomlin's knife had been driven into his heart. Tomlin was so desperately wounded, and when Sally reached his side he had fallen from exhaustion and loss of blood. Crying bitterly she knelt beside him. He had voice only to tell her the cause of the duel, and beg her to wear his "pretty" forever as a remembrance of his love. Then his tones grew husky, his eyes dimmed, and with the name of the coquette on his lips

The small farmers who people the broken country west of here, are densely ignorant and intensely superstitious. The little valleys are full of moonshine whisky stills, and the deputy United States marshals are kept busy routing them out and arresting their owners. The first revenue officers that raided through northeast Georgia immediately after reconstruction were northern men. They literally fought their way through the country, and even ventured on a raid without the protection of soldiers of Second United States Infantry which command was stationed at that time at Ringgold Barracks, Atlanta. The marshals met with only indifferent success at first, for they were unfamiliar with the country and the moonshiners had them at a disadvantage. When they had formed some new

These apostates were bitterly hated by the illiberal distillers, and more than one man, who betrayed the hiding place of a still, was ambushed and shot down. Others were captured, whipped with hickory whips and so terrorized that they were glad to flee the country. When Gen. Jeff Findlay was a deputy mar-

THEY ARE TWO OF A KIND.

THE BRILLIANT YOUNG MEN WHO HEAD THE TICKET.

Pen Pictures of John Temple Graves and Thomas E. Watson—Veritable "Little Giants" in the Race.

"Just now the two most prominent young men in Georgia are John Temple Graves and Thomas E. Watson, the democratic presidential nominees at large."

This prominence is not due alone to the fact that they have been chosen to lead the democratic party in this presidential contest, but it is the result of the recognition of their vast personal popularity as it is a "good pair to draw to."

Graves and Watson are two of a kind in very many respects, and all who know them are sure it is "powerful good things."

Somebody argues that to be successful in life, a man must be a commanding physique. If that is the rule, George furnishes at least two electorships. The total weight of their two electorship figures is 247 pounds 12, 127 pounds of which belongs to Mr. Watson and 120 to Mr. Graves.

And handsome? Have you ever seen them?

"Watson and I have a contest live the appearance of respective claims de veritate," said Colonel Graves a few days ago, "and during the state convention, spoken upon this thing." He was referring to the fact. Finally I found a man in Watson's own district who declared that I was a perfect Adonis when compared to my rival, and that settler him.

"If the Cooper River can survive the appearance of such pictures as Graves' and mine it can stand anything," wrote the gentleman from McLeod, in response to a request for a photograph; and adds later on, "Am I to go to an extent which almost seems find amusing."

They are fraternal men!

JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

He received his education in Asheville and Greenville, S. C., and in Tuskegee, Ala. From the latter school he entered the university of Georgia in 1872 and graduated with honors. His record of eminence of honor in his classes and in the societies.

Mr. Graves took quite a prominent part in two championship debates. Being a member of the Phi Kappa society, he enjoyed the reputation of being the society could test no, participated, on his graduation day, in the champion debate over which General Gordon presided, and who pronounced him the finest he had ever heard of.

A recently published sketch of him states that in 1875 he was principal of the West Point Normal school, and from there he moved to Ladysburg, Ga., where he succeeded in securing the presidency of the military institute of that place for fifteen months. He was subsequently connected with the Applesons in Atlanta, where he was employed as chief clerk of the Athens Sunday Banner, in which he described, in a very graphic manner, the contest for the United States senate between Joseph E. Brown and A. T. Waddell.

During this period he was engaged in a discussion of the forces and sentiment prevalent in this contest between the old south or conservatism and the new south of nullification. This article attracted a great deal of attention, and now occupies a place in Avery's History of Georgia as one of the finest pieces of descriptive writing of that period.

That article was offered a position on the staff of the Florida Daily Union, at that time the only daily paper in the state. By diligent industry, at the time of consolidation, he secured the position of managing editor. After the consolidation of the Union and the Times he founded the Florida Daily Herald, which for four years had brilliant success. It became the most powerful organ of public opinion in the state, and exercised the most dominant influence in the politics of the state.

In 1884 Mr. Graves led the ballot at the Florida Democratic convention, and was elected to the presidential electoral college at large, for the Cleveland campaign, over some of the ablest men of the state. He canvassed the state in company with Governor Hendricks, Senator Ollie and others. His canvass was marked by brilliancy and power, and the Florida press generally conceded him the first place among the leaders of the state. After the election he became the messenger of the Florida electoral college to carry the electoral votes to the city of Washington.

In 1888 he was a candidate for congress in the Jacksonville district, and was defeated by Hon. Charles H. Blandy, then congressman from that section, upon the strength of that Florida custom of giving every representative two terms in congress.

In the primary election Mr. Graves was followed to the polls by a large majority of the intelligence and wealth of the metropolis of Florida.

In the summer of 1887 falling health necessitated a change of climate, and he returned to Georgia. While passing through Atlanta he was, without solicitation, named as the editorship of the Evening Journal, which post he occupied to the eminent satisfaction and endorsement of the proprietors and patrons for two months, resigning at the end of that time to accept the editorship of the Tribune of Macon.

"In whose service," he writes, "I intend to devote the remainder of my life."

Under his management the Tribune has become a power in its section. Its policy has been the building up of home and industry, and its cordiality in that the meet with the hearty appreciation of the people.

In the same direction have been Mr. Graves' efforts to promote immigration to the south. As chairman of the interstate committee, the cheap rates and the excursions from the north to the south were largely due to his individual efforts. It was work which deserved the gratitude of the entire south.

Two months and four days before John T. Graves came into the world, Thomas E. Watson was born in what was then Columbia, now McIntosh county, Georgia.

His father was in prison about three years, and until he was 16 years old Watson was given no book education. He was the son of a poor class of North Carolina university when his father's failure in business threw him out of college and down his own resources.

He was practically penniless. Being at auction a few choice books were sold, and he also received a small sum from his mother and her friends.

Watson went to Screven county and secured a position as the teacher of a country school. He taught there a couple of years, spending his vacation in Augusta, where he read law a few weeks under Judge Wm. R. McLane. At nineteen years of age he was admitted to the bar.

After this he went back to Screven county and taught school, all the while doing his little law. And because he was able to pick up about the justice course. There was no money in that. This hand-to-mouth existence, full of the hardest kind of work, would have broken the spirit of a less determined man. Of this period, he pathetically writes, "October, 1876, found me so poor a churchman would have thought twice about it before he would have sent abroad for my company. The main trouble was want of means to obtain a support for my practice as a lawyer would put me on my feet."

It was in this strait that Watson went to one of his old school teachers, stated the case and asked for a year's board, that he might have a chance to study law. But he couldn't make a success at the law. This friend lived at Thomson's Valley, where he wanted to stay. He was a friend indeed, for he gave the struggling young lawyer school in Watson's name. His help was the turning point in Watson's career.

TOMAS E. WATSON.

BAD BLOOD

HAS DESTROYED MANY MORE PEOPLE

Than Famine or Pestilence—S. S. S., the Chief of Blood Purifiers, the Greatest Boon to Humanity.

The truth of this statement is being demonstrated every day by the grateful testimony of those who suffer. Here are a few more statements, which are constantly coming in from all over the country:

LEESBURG, Ga., September 12, 1888.

Gentlemen—I had occasional fevers, and was bilious for a long while. One medicament after another was suggested and taken. To relieve me of bile, but without effect. For nearly four months I was alternately in and out of bed, and all the while unable to do any work or feed anything that would improve my condition. It seemed that my case was growing hopeless, my health growing worse with every effort to improve it. I was at length induced to take S. S. S., and a favorable change having begun with the first bottle, I am completely cured by taking six. I am satisfied from my experience, that S. S. S. is a safe and sovereign remedy for biliousness brought on by the malaria of this climate, and I take pleasure in recommending it for that purpose.

B. K. CROSS.

RICHMOND, Va., July 24, 1888.

The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.:
Gentlemen—Some five years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poison, brought on by the excessive use of liquor. My condition physically was wretched; sores without number appeared upon my body. I consulted the best physicians within my reach, and although they gave me relief, it was only for the time being. I left my home and spent the season at various summer resorts, but without any good results. Finally I was induced to try your medicine. It did so and was more than pleased with the result. Soon after taking the medicine began to improve, and in less than a month all the sores and pimples had disappeared from my body. I attribute my restoration to health entirely to your medicine. My friends throughout this city can vouch for the truth of the statement. Very respectfully,

J. K. PUTNAM.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., August 12, 1888.

The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.:
Gentlemen—I have been benefited by the use of S. S. S., and that others who have been troubled with blood poison may have the benefit of my experience I cheerfully give it. In 1880 I contracted a case of blood poison, and although the best physicians gave me a first treatment, I secured no relief. A year later I was advised to try S. S. S. The result was wonderful. In a few weeks the old sores healed and my system was perfectly clear. S. S. S. had done what all other medicine and physician had failed to do.

R. W. H. MORGAN.

LEESBURG, Ga., September 13, 1888.

The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.:
Gentlemen—I was in bad health, feeble, no appetite and unable to go out from home for nine years. During five years of that time I did not go out of the yard, and seldom was enough to get out of the house. For four years a dangerous ulcer preyed upon my system, and was fast taking the general prostration to hurry me to the grave. Several physicians worked faithfully, but in vain, to restore my health. One of the most eminent kept me under constant treatment two years. All this time I was growing worse. About six years ago I began taking S. S. S., and a change for the better commenced before the first bottle had been finished. I took five more bottles and the ulcer was entirely gone, my strength returned and my appetite was restored. I was able to visit my neighbors, and for a person of my age—now seventy-five—I have ever since been remarkably well. The effect of the medicine on me has been simply wonderful. As before stated, it healed an ulcer that nothing else could heal—restored health nothing else could restore—and certainly saved me from the grave.

MARY KING.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., August 20, 1888.

To the Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.:
Gentlemen—An ugly carbuncle appeared upon my neck last fall, and continued to grow until I was unable to turn my head. I tried everything I knew of, but could not drive it away until I commenced taking Swift's Specific. The carbuncle had been my constant companion for three months, but before I had used the first bottle of S. S. S. it began to disappear, and in a short time I was again able to turn my head. The scar alone remains.

FRANK K. BARTON.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 25, 1888.

The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.:
Gentlemen—I have been benefited by your S. S. S., and am willing that you use this paper. Three years ago I had a bad case of blood poison, which neither physicians or Hot Springs would cure. Your medicine taken on the suggestion of a friend, however, produced a cure, and today I am in perfect health.

C. W. HUDSON.

ALBANY, Ga., September 15, 1888.

The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.:
Gentlemen—I was induced to take S. S. S. because of an attack of rheumatism (which disease is hereditary in my mother's family) during the year 1885 and cure d/t by taking Swift's Specific.

MRS. A. J. THOMAS.

FORSYTH, Ga., September 10, 1888.

Mr. J. M. Chambliss, a worthy citizen of Monroe county, Ga., writes:

"I suffered three years with kidney and liver troubles, brought on by the impurities of the blood. Several physicians prescribed for me and I took a number of different medicines strictly following the instructions in every instance. Nothing gave me more than temporary relief, to be followed by a relapse soon after the medicine was discontinued. Some few years ago I was induced to take S. S. S. After taking a few bottles a permanent cure. The most gratifying improvement of my health began and has continued. I was unable, formerly, to discharge my ordinary duties, because of indigestion and generally debility but now I am attending to those duties, and Swift's Specific is the only medicine that has given me any benefit, whatever. After trying many other remedies I take pleasure in certifying that S. S. S. is the only one that has all remedied the impurities of my blood. Treatise on blood and skin diseases mailed free.

DIED AT HIS POST.

EDITOR EDWIN MARTIN SUCCEEDS TO THE GRIM MONSTER.

NINE DEATHS—THIRTY-THREE CASES

Is the Report from Jacksonville for Yesterday—A Bad Record for Decatur—Death of Several Prominent Citizens.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., October 7.—[Special.] It was almost inevitable from the turn which the fever took, Mr. Edwin Martin, editor of the Times-Union, died today. He lingered peacefully through the night, but early in the morning became delirious and continued so until released from pain at 10 o'clock. The forms of the Times-Union were kept open until 5 o'clock in order to give the public the latest news of his condition.

Mr. Martin was about forty-one years old, leaves a wife, three small children and an aged mother. The funeral will take place at 11 a. m. Monday under charge of the Masonic fraternity and Knights of Honor. His wife and children are in Perry, Ga., the mother and children at the residence of Dr. Redmond, on the banks of the St. John's river, four miles above the city. The press club will attend in a body. Both the city editor and managing editor of the Times-Union have fallen victims to yellow fever.

Edwin Martin had been managing news-editor of the old Times-Union from December, 1886, to March, 1888, when he became editor-in-chief of the News-Herald and retained this position upon the Times-Union upon the consolidation of the two papers on May 1st, 1888. Previous to coming to Jacksonville, he had been an editorial writer on the Savannah Morning News for a year or two. He was a native of Tennessee, and entered the confederate service at the age of 15, and was a herald on the staff of one of the cavalry commanders, afterwards he went to Georgia and settled in one of the upper counties of the state, where he practiced law and edited a weekly newspaper. He represented his county in the legislature for one or two terms and finally abandoned law for the field of journalism.

At a meeting of the Jacksonville Press Club, held this afternoon at the bureau of the Savannah Morning News, resolutions of regret were adopted on the death of Mr. Martin.

H. W. Clark of the transportation committee, last night sent three very important telegrams to managers of the various companies which handle the annual output of Florida oranges.

Mr. G. D. Owens, traffic manager of the Plant system, has inquired what action, if any, the board of health of Savannah was likely to take with reference to giving free passage to Florida fruit. Mr. Clark requested that Owens communicate with that body at once and learn what the prospects were. Mr. Sorrell, of the Ocean Steamship company, was sent a telegram of like tenor. Mr. Clark further asked of W. P. Clyde & Co. if it would not be possible for them to put on a steamship service between New York and Mayport, to connect with the river steamer which would bring fruit from unfettered counties and pass down the river without touching at Jacksonville. It will thus be seen that every effort is being made to provide for safe conduct of fruit to northern markets.

Saturday evening, at a meeting of the executive committee, President McQuaid stated that, as requested, he had wired Gainesville and Fernandina offering assistance from this committee, but had received no answer. He also read a telegram from Major J. H. Durkee, of New York, requesting information about assistance the committee was furnishing other places.

Upon motion the president was requested to write an appropriate reply, and also to telegraph Fernandina inquiring their immediate necessities. Captain W. C. Cooper explained the arrangements at Camp Mitchell, and showed a plat of the camp. Right Rev. E. G. Weed reported on his visit to the camp and suggested that measures be taken to permit and urge refugees stopping in the country to go into this camp.

Upon motion, the relief committee were requested to publish a notice requesting persons now hiding in the country and desiring to go to Camp Mitchell, to make application to the central relief committee. Mr. G. E. Wilson explained the practical method of paying off nurses in his committee of nurses and medical attention. Subsequently the following was issued:

I desire to call attention to the present condition of Camp Mitchell and to urge all persons who desire to retire to some place out of the infected district, to retire there at once. This camp, after thorough personal inspection, I have no hesitancy in saying will transmit the most satisfactory and healthful all who have occasion to leave the city to return to Florida from other sections. Comfortable quarters have been erected with every convenience, water closets, good beds and bedding and plenty of food and, even the luxuries of life. Captain Cooper has made arrangements to establish an excellent camp and every one that goes to the camp can be assured of a most restful stay with the comfort and convenience of home life.

Lewis G. Webb, Chairman.

Dr. Van Hook is doing nicely. Mr. F. R. King Hall, the World's special correspondent came down from the Sand Hills yesterday with Dr. Solace Mitchell, but returned again.

Frank Crowl, colored, another member of the police force, was taken down with fever last night. Sergeant W. A. Smith, of the police force, was out yesterday for the first time since his tussle with the fever. He leaves shortly for Georgia, where amid the scenes of his boyhood, his friends hope he will regain his former health and vigor. Mrs. Margaret Simpson Fairlie, wife of Dr. J. M. Fairlie, died this morning at 3 o'clock from extreme nervous prostration, after an attack of yellow fever. James K. Zeward, one of the Harry Miner delegation, and Dr. Neal Mitchell, fourth private secretary, was taken sick yesterday and removed to Bay State house.

He has yellow fever and was carried to the Sand Hills this noon. Mr. Saxton, a former secretary, has taken his place. When the epidemic first broke out Dr. Webster's clerk became very much alarmed and fled from the fever with the rest of the refugees and left no one to take charge of his drug store. Mr. Webster immediately took his place, however, and has bravely stood at his post ever since. She has also distributed among the sick of the neighborhood a great many delicacies, such as chickens, birds and eggs, many of which have been sent to her by friends out of the city.

A crowd was attracted to the corner of Bay and Laura streets this afternoon by the strange appearance of a young man apparently intoxicated. He finally began vomiting blood, and at last fell fainting to the pavement. An ambulance was summoned by a policeman and the man sent to St. Luke's hospital. Inquiry revealed the fact that the man had been discharged from an attack of yellow fever only a few days previous. This was doubtless a relapse. His name was Mead, a bookbinder by trade.

The Official Bulletin.

Dr. Neale Mitchell, president of the board of health, issues the following official bulletin for 24 hours, ending at 6 p. m., Sunday Oct. 7th:

HARRISON.—Died at the residence, 109 Capitol Avenue, Mr. James P. Harrison, at 7 p. m., October 6th. Friends of the family of Mr. Z. D. Harrison and Mr. G. W. Harrison are invited to attend the funeral from the First Baptist church, Monday, October 8 at 3:30 p. m. Interment at Oakland cemetery.

THIS WEEK WE ANNOUNCE TO YOU

That We Have Completed Our Fourteenth Club.

It seems wonderful to think of. When you sit down and figure fourteen clubs of fifty members each for a fifty dollar watch, you will see that every club represents to us a sale of $2,500 worth of watches and diamonds, and the fourteen clubs a total sale of $35,000 worth of goods, and all done in the past eleven weeks. Now, when we are selling this large amount of watches and diamonds don't it sound reasonable when we say we will guarantee to save you $10 on each watch or diamond you buy in our club?

The following are the numbers of the members who got watches Monday evening:

Club No. 1, member No. 32.
Club No. 2, member No. 33.
Club No. 3, member No. 1.
Club No. 4, member No. 22.
Club No. 5, member No. 39.
Club No. 6, member No. 43.
Club No. 7, member No. 42.
Club No. 8, member No. 35.
Club No. 9, member No. 40.
Club No. 10, member No. 18.
Club No. 11, member No. 23.
Club No. 12, member No. 40.
Club No. 13, member No. 31.
Club No. 14, member No. 41.

Bifurcated club now forming, and will draw next Monday at 6:30 p. m. Join now and get a solid 14 karat gold watch for a very reasonable price. If you want a higher price watch, say $75, $100 or $150, you can secure it in our club. We do not restrict you to $50 watches. Ladies' watches and diamonds on the same plan. Now is the time to commence paying for your Christmas presents. The J. R. Stevens & Bro., Watch Club, H. R. Catfield, manager.
